AGITATION LED TO JAMIA MILLIA ISLAMIA AGREEING TO CONDUCT STUDENT UNION POLLS

'True democracy needs us...': Meet the women behind Jamia student protests

Tabshir Shams
New Delhi, October 30

AT 4 pm on October 27, near the central canteen, Nausheen Farooq went over her notes before addressing the media. Dressed in a yellow kurti, pyjamas and a head scarf, she muttered each point under her breath. Her friends surrounded her, talking, planning, while one adjusted her microphone.

A few steps away, Haneena Bint Omar was walking from the Geography Department to the Political Science building, carrying a water gallon in each hand. Other students walked alongside, carrying more water and packets of food to be passed over the spiked boundary wall. On Wednesday, the students secured a breakthrough, with the university setting a timeline for elections by July 2027. In a late-night order, the Registrar's office set May 15, 2027, as the deadline for approving and implementing the Jamia Millia Islamia Students' Union (JMISU) constitution. The order directed that elections be held within six weeks of the start of the academic session, in accordance with the Lyngdoh Committee guidelines. The next academic session is expected to begin on July 15, 2027.

Nausheen, from Port Blair in the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, is a second-year MA student in Disaster Management. She has a BSc from Madras University and chose Jamia because it is a central university. Then she noticed the problems students were facing — "poor hygiene, rooms and washrooms in bad shape, and the quality of food".

Nausheen also pointed out how women had a 10 pm entry deadline. "When we had approached the administration, they gave a very casual, lackadaisical reply," she claimed. "If there was a union, there would be a representative from our side and we wouldn't be facing problems." Haneena, a third-year law student from Thrissur in Kerala, said alleged malpractice in admissions was among the issues that pushed her into the protest.

"When you see something wrong happening, you have to raise your voice," she said. "I was privileged to be brought up in a family where we were taught to ask questions and to speak up when something bad happens."

She named Ambedkar, Savitribai Phule and Fatima Sheikh as her inspirations. "But for me, Deen comes first."

This was not their first protest. Haneena and Nausheen were part of the Cockroach Janta Party's October 10 protest against irregularities in the Special Intensive Revision and were detained in Shalimar Bagh. They had gone, they said, to defend electoral democracy in India.
